Building the future of healthcare starts with investing in people and partnerships.

As we look ahead to 2026, we're proud to reflect on a series of meaningful industry-university collaborations that concluded the past year.

In November and December, we welcomed students and lecturers from Sunway University, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia (UKM), and International Medical University (IMU) to our Oncology manufacturing plant, offering firsthand exposure to a USFDA-approved pharmaceutical manufacturing environment and global quality standards in action.

Beyond plant tours, our teams shared real-world insights into career pathways within the pharmaceutical industry through guided Production and Quality Control walkthroughs and experience-sharing sessions, providing an interactive platform to connect with high-potential students and inspire the next generation of industry talent.

Our commitment to contributing to the broader community aligns with our mission to make quality medicines more affordable and accessible by nurturing future talent and cultivating a passion for meaningful work. Moving into the new year, we look forward to deepening these partnerships as we continue to play our part in shaping the future of the industry.
