Nimesh Patel | Driven to Challenge the Status Quo

An engineer with vast experience in pharmaceutical, Nimesh is a seasoned professional with a passion to challenge the status quo. Being in the industry for more than 18 years, he has seen the healthcare landscape developing at a rapid pace over the years - becoming one of his driving forces to continuously seek for self-growth and improvement.

"With the current pattern of increased demand for quality treatment, I truly believe that my contribution in the healthcare industry is increasingly meaningful. Even though my role is focused on a specific fraction of engineering, I feel proud yet humbled to be able to play my part of ensuring the accessibility of advanced medication to patients across the globe."

Nimesh's areas of expertise range diversely; working in reputable pharma industries – from handling engineering quality system compliance and major regulatory inspections to being one of the key people who handled the conceptual design to operational and commercialization for manufacturing facilities establishment.

Being part of Novugen Pharma is the highlight of Nimesh's career. "My journey with the company has been amazing. Not only that I am able to grow alongside the company, but I also got the chance to contribute my knowledge and experience to my team. Furthermore, I take pride to be part of Novugen Pharma's manufacturing facility development in Bandar Enstek, Negeri Sembilan from the ground up to the operationalizing stage.

"It is not uncommon for challenges to arise in any given role. Resource planning and achieving milestones is not easy when we are facing with time constraints. But instead of letting this becoming a barrier of achieving my goals, I learned how to improve myself through analysing my time utilization and planning my resources more strategically."

Recently, Nimesh was involved in a successful products development and manufacturing as a key person focusing on engineering support. Besides that, as one of the earliest people to be in the engineering department, Nimesh has achieved to setup the engineering team and QMS systems for engineering department at Novugen Pharma. "I believe that hard work is not an option and there is no shortcut to attain success. My achievements are also contributed by strong sense of ownership and high commitment to my work and passion".

Besides his team and passion, the foundation of his inspiration is his parents who have been his role model and helped him to aim high and continuously pushed him to do better in whatever he puts his mind into. His advice for those who are just beginning their journey in any industry; to be clear with their goals and vision and put all their effort to achieve them.
